We Can Handle Problem

The committee on regulations had our pers we have evidence that best interests at heart, but, what is more important, they had the firm conviction that under the honor system we can handle this problem without conferring a stiffer penalty.

Now every one of us has the opportunity and obligation to back up the faith that committee has in us. We've got to be on time. We must make promptness a habit. This will involve leaving the grill in time to catch the bus instead of counting on a ride that never materializes. It may mean missing the cartoon or the newsreel. But it will also mean that we've got what it takes to run our student government.

Might Be Penalized

If we really can't be in on time and if we're not grown up enough to accept the responsibility, the Congress delegates have recommended a penalty which involves the loss of a permission every time we're late.

We have a chance to prove that this recommendation need never be enforced. We've got to take this seriously and we've got to start now. Punctuality is an admirable virtue. We'll all be much happier and people who live with us in the future will be happier, too, if we've acquired this virtue.

'He Don't' Grads Are Not Necessary

If yer grammar ain't so grand, you might be a bit upset about one of the recommendations passed at the SLC congress and referred to the faculty commitee on educational policies.

That recommendation consists of the following stipulations. Freshmen who do not do well on their entrance exam in the field of grammar will be required to take an intensified course. They will be given two chances to pass a grammar test, at the end of the first semester and at the end of the year. Should they flunk both exams, they will be asked not to return to Clarke.

We would like to endorse this plan. Harsh as it may seem, we feel that it would be most effective. There are far too many students who shuffle along with their "ain'ts" and "he don'ts" without ever stopping to think. But we're sure that if they were served the ultimatum — learn that grammar or don't come back - they'd learn the grammar, fast.

We find it hard to comprehend a "bachelor of arts" who can't speak or write correctly. We don't think it should be necessary to comprehend. At any rate, we'd hate to admit that the "he don't" B.A. is a Clarke graduate.

they disclosed little of what is new and only succeeded in starting more controversies than they settled. I am definitely for secret diplomacy.

Camille Potenzo, senior from Chicago, says: On the whole, knowing that many gross errors were made at the Yalta meeting, I don't think that the Bricker amendment is going to solve anything.

In international affairs, only those in the government are qualified to undertake the responsibility of deciding what is to be done. I don't see the advantage in having the public

Granted, the men involved in the Yalta meeting made some serious mistakes. But would those now in office have done better?

I think that there must be better solution than the Bricker amendment.

Lois Wissel, senior from Dubuque, says: I am not in favor of the Bricker Amendment. I feel that such an amendment would rob the president of his power to make necessary treaties and executive agreements. It would probably upset the traditional balance of power between the legislative and executive branches of government.

Carol Schulte, sophomore from Ft. Madison, says: As far as I can see the greatest effect of the Bricker Amendment would be to hinder diplomatic relations while the diplomats would make a grandstand ap. pearance.

The average person doesn't usually have enough information to handle foreign relations and make important decisions. Results of secret meetings are released. It is only the that is left a mystery and I believe that this should be left in the hands of qualified people.

In the Yalta case, the release of the papers did not profit anyone or reveal anything pertinent so I stand against the amendment.
